FORD COUPE JUMPS FENCE

Three men in a Ford Model A coupe figured in an unusual accident Monday morning when their car rode up on the cable of the guard fence on the west side of Mill Brook bridge on the West Bethel road and plunged to the concrete abutment of the bridge, breaking through ice. The car had been traveling rapidly and after striking the fence broke off five posts before its dive to the river. Only one of the men required a doctor's attention, and the car was driven to the village under its own power. The car bore 1934 New Hampshire registration plates and was registered to Joseph Kurisko of Berlin.

TEACHERS' MEETING HELD AT UPTON

A meeting of the members of the teaching staffs of Newry, Upton, Magalloway and Lincoln was held in Upton last Saturday. The meeting was called by Supt. R. E. Pomeroy of Upton 23. Through the courtesy of Mrs. Bessie Reynolds the Newry members were able to attend, and through the courtesy of Mrs. Isabelle Bryant of Lincoln Plantation and Clifford Wallace of Magalloway Plantation, the teachers from those two towns were able to be present. After a few words of welcome by Supt. Pomeroy and general introductions, a date in May was set for another meeting in Magalloway, to wind up the year.

The program follows:
Standard Tests were discussed and samples examined.

The filling out of various forms for the compilation of required data was explained.

Educational Pickups were then read and approved or criticized.

Methods of assigning a lesson or how to teach any topic was demonstrated by Superintendent Pomeroy and general discussion followed.

Various problems which might arise in school and their solution were animatingly considered.

During the noon hour a box luncheon was enjoyed supplemented by hot coffee and fruit; served through the kindness of Mrs. Douglass and Mrs. Lane. All was made possible by the granting of the Grange Hall by the local Grange.

Those present were Helen Hinds, Millie Williams, Phoebe Hilton, Frances Lane, Aubrey Flanders, Doris Clifford, Marie Thompson, Clifford Wallace, Dorothy Staples, Ruby Ritchie, Bessie Reynolds, Little Douglass, Rena Lane, Isabelle Bryant and R. E. Pomeroy.

WESTERN MAINE ALUMNI OF U. OF M. MEETS APRIL 10

The Western Maine Alumni Association of the University of Maine will hold its annual stag meeting and banquet at the Portland Y. M. C. A. on April 10th at 6:30 P. M. President A. A. Hauck of the University, Track Coach C. L. Jenkins, and Alumni Secretary Charles E. Crossland will speak on matters concerning the University.

The entire facilities of the gymnasium, swimming pool, and recreation rooms of the Y. M. C. A. will be at the disposal of the guests following the banquet. Group activities and athletic games will be organized. Preparations are being made for 200 guests. It is hoped that a large number will attend.

STATE OF MAINE PROCLAMATION BY THE GOVERNOR

"WHEREAS, the National Housing Act, through the Federal Housing Administration has made it possible for the owner of real property to:

Better the living conditions of his family, increase the efficiency of his business, protect, and safeguard his investments, stimulate the morals and workmanship of his employees, improve the standards and civic pride of his neighborhood, and

WHEREAS, a Better Housing Program under the National Housing Act was launched in Maine September 1, 1934 and since that date approximately one million dollars have been spent by the people of Maine in modernization of their homes, resulting in the removal of hundreds of workmen from the Federal Emergency Relief Administration's rolls and the absorption of a large percentage of skilled labor in all parts of the State. This program has naturally stimulated all lines of business and industry. The efficacy of the National Housing Act is unquestioned. Results thus far obtained justify its enactment by Congress. It offers the people of not only Maine but the entire country a sound and constructive program through the employment of private capital for national recovery as well as affording our citizens opportunity to provide their families with new and modern homes and the improvement of existing property which has been permitted to deteriorate.

NOW THEREFORE, I, Louis J. Brann, by virtue of Authority vested in me as Governor of Maine, do hereby call upon all our people generally, as well as all Chambers of Commerce, civic and commercial organizations, clubs and other organized groups of whatever nature, to support the Better Housing Campaign that the greatest possible good may accrue to our State. In this connection I hereby set aside the period beginning APRIL 1, 1935 and ending APRIL 8, 1935 as

BETTER HOUSING WEEK

Our citizens are urged to actively participate in state-wide observance of this period as reflected in various community programs arranged for the occasion."

Given at the office of the Governor at Augusta, and sealed with the Great Seal of the State of Maine, this twenty-first day of March, in the year of our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Thirty-five and of the Independence of the United States of America the One Hundred and Fifty-ninth

GOULD SENIOR PLAY COMING NEXT WEEK

The complete program for the picturesque production of Irish country life, "My Irish Rose," has been announced by Miss Ruth A. Leavengood, director of the annual Gould Academy senior class play.

The play will be presented at 8:15 o'clock, Friday evening, April 5, at the William Bingham Gymnasium.

The story of the play centers about Rose Creigan, a little Irish country lass, who is the pride of her bachelor uncle Colum McCorrack and her aunt Ann Mary. Her brother, Terence Creigan, has been cashiered from the army on account of a superior officer's complaint, and has gone to America. Maurice Fitzgerald, a wealthy Dublin artist, falls in love with Rose while painting her picture. He proposes marriage and is accepted. Shortly after he learns from his family lawyer, Mr. Pepperdine, that his

BASEBALL PLANS TO BE DISCUSSED TUESDAY EVE.

A meeting of baseball enthusiasts will be held at Rowe's store next Tuesday evening at 7:30. The purpose of the meeting is to elect officers of the Bethel Athletic Association for the coming year and to discuss plans for the approaching baseball season. All interested in a good, strong, home baseball team are urged to attend the meeting.

"THE MEDDLESOME MAID" PLAY WELL ATTENDED

The play, "The Meddlesome Maid," presented last week by the Epworth League, was very well attended and the members wish to express their appreciation to the townspeople for their support, and to the friends who helped them in so many ways.

Every member of the cast did exceptionally well, and the director, Mrs. Alma Thurston, is to be congratulated upon the success of the performance.

The play itself was very amusing with many unique situations which met with the approval of the audience from start to finish.

The fine specialties given by Miss Elizabeth Bean and Earle Eldredge were also much enjoyed as well as the young people's orchestra which gave several selections before the curtain rose.

From the many favorable comments, it is certain that the public will always welcome Epworth League plays in the future.

FRAZER COOLIDGE

Angus Frazer and Dorothy Coolidge, both of Gilead, were married March 23 at the M. E. Parsonage by Rev. J. J. Clifford. The bride was attended by the daughter of the groom, Mrs. Jeanette Stuart of Gilead and the groom by Sherman Emery of Gilead.

The bride was very prettily garbed in a rose pink jacket suit and carried a bouquet of pinks to match. The groom wore the conventional black. After the ceremony the happy couple headed east for points not named, but returned this week to Gilead where they will reside.

ELI STEARNS

The community was saddened upon hearing of the death of Eli Stearns early Tuesday morning at his home in Hanover. Mr. Stearns had been in poor health for a long time but during the past two weeks he faded rapidly. He leaves to mourn his loss his wife, a son, Leroy, and a grandson, Warren. Besides several cousins. Funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon at 2 p. m. at the home.

MRS. REBECCA A. HAMILTON

The following from a recent issue of the Portland Press Herald will be of interest to many of our readers as Mr. Hamilton was pastor of the Bethel Methodist Church about 40 years ago.

Old Orchard Beach, March 20. Mrs. Rebecca A. Hamilton, 80, widow of Rev. Alexander Hamilton, who was for many years minister of the Old Orchard Beach Methodist Episcopal Church, died suddenly at her home, 4 Pine Avenue, this morning.

She was born in South Westport, Mass., the daughter of Adrian and Martha Gifford Davis. In her girlhood she was a Quaker, her parents being members of that faith.

Mrs. Hamilton was a member of the local church, the W. C. T. U. of this town, and was a life member of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. A. L. Whittemore, Mrs. Elsie Washburn and Mrs. Clinton C. Mewer, all of Old Orchard Beach, and two sons, Paul Hamilton of Stockton Springs and the Rev. Willis Hamilton of Milburn, N. J.

Funeral services will be conducted at the Methodist Church Friday, at 3:30 p. m.

DR. WILLIAM R. CHAPMAN DR. CHAPMAN DIES IN FLA. HOSPITAL

Word has been received of the death of Dr. William Rogers Chapman at a hospital in Palm Beach, Fla., at seven o'clock last evening. Dr. Chapman had been ill several weeks and underwent an operation last Friday.

The family will start on the trip north the first of the week.

BENEFIT CARD PARTY

On Wednesday evening of this week, Mrs. C. W. Hall entertained 12 tables at cards for the benefit of the Ways and Means Club. Refreshments were served by the hostess and prizes awarded at each table by the captain in charge. An unusually pleasant evening was enjoyed by all present.

GIRL SCOUT NEWS

The Girl Scouts held the meeting Friday, March 22, with an attendance of 22. We sang America, repeated the Scout Promise, had inspection, sang the Star Spangled Banner, and went to our corners to study.

After the business meeting we danced and practiced drills. Mr. Van came up to help us on signaling, also to give some tests. After the meeting the Court of Honor was held. Scout Scribe Virginia Smith

ASSESSORS' NOTICE

The Assessors of the Town of Bethel hereby give notice to all persons liable to taxation in said Town, that they will be in session at the Selectmen's Office in said Town on the 1st day of April, at 10 o'clock a. m. for the purpose of receiving lists of the polls and estates taxable in said town.

All such persons are hereby notified to make and bring to said Assessors true and perfect lists of their polls and all their estates, real and personal, not be law exempt from taxation, which they held as guardian executor, administrator, trustee or otherwise on the first day of April, 1935, and be prepared to make oath to the truth of the same.

When estates of persons deceased have been divided during the past year, or have changed hands from any cause, the executor, administrator or other persons interested are hereby warned to give notice of such change, and in default of such notice will be held under the law to pay the tax assessed although such estate has been wholly distributed and paid over.

Any person who neglects to comply with this notice will be DOOMED to a tax according to the laws of the State and be barred of the right to make application to the Assessors or County Commissioners for any abatement of his taxes, unless he offers such lists with his application and satisfies them that he was unable to offer it at the time hereby appointed.

SOUTH WOODSTOCK

The old saying goes "It takes all kinds of people to make the world," and it might also be said it takes all kinds of weather. On Saturday, March 23, hail and snow were falling, at 9:30 in the evening two vivid flashes of lightning were seen followed by the distant peal of thunder, and then at 12:30 a m., heavy, raw winds were blowing.

Fred Grant, Rockland, Mass.; Clarence Dean, Auburn; and Norman Bisbee, Sumner; were week end guests of Lenwood Andrews.

Mrs. Omer Perron, Mr. and Mrs. Grant LaRose and baby, Marie, all of Auburn were Sunday guests of Mrs. Lottie Jackson at H. M. Andrews'.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Dean and daughter visited at Athens over the week end.

Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Davis were Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Cummings, West Paris.

Some of the worst places on our most traveled roads are being repaired but very little can be done until more frost is out of the ground.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Pence of Auburn spent the week end with her mother, Mrs. Angie Robbins.

Mr. and Mrs. Burt Cole were at Harland Andrews' Sunday.

Joseph Barrett and family have returned home. Mr. Barrett was in the woods all winter. Mrs. Barrett and son spent the winter months with her parents at North Woodstock.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Andrews and baby spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Farrington at Bryant Pond.

Mr. and Mrs. Gayden Davis were in Lewiston Monday.

The many friends of Mrs. Flossie Perham, R. N., are glad to learn she is improving, though slowly.

G. W. Q. Perham, Albert Felt, George Cushman, Ronello Davis and Claud Cushman were in Augusta recently.

Mrs. Mary Andrews was pleasantly surprised on Friday, March 22, when nine of her friends gathered at the home of her son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Andrews, to help celebrate her 80th birthday.

One very pleasing gift was a beautiful birthday cake made by her niece, Mrs. Jessie Jackson Andrews, "Aunt Mary" to all who knew her, is still very active for her advanced age, still caring for her own room and doing her share of sewing and darning. What seemed to be her greatest joy for the afternoon was in seeing little James Harland, four weeks old son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Andrews. Not many can say they are a great, great, great aunt, but Aunt Mary claims this privilege to little James.

OLD-TIME RELIG

folks, it seems good to have this station, over the air more. I shall have for my time is limited to give you my message. What has become of the Religion?

Some preachers still advocate a measure up to its standards. I believe a few lay-people live in it and live it in their lives. But when I present to the "rank and file" I find it is very unpopular. About 97% will answer "old fashioned." Like all other discussions, current "hashed over" in the vital, spiritual, soul-uplifting are quite left untouched by sanctuaries upon the air. To draw the crowd, I must go with "a pop, a pop," or people of that type stop and listen to it. They want a sermon manufactured for the preacher. He is as was in a dialogue with a member not long ago. I remarked—do you still believe in the Lord's Prayer, "Thy kingdom come?" The answer was "certainly!" I went on to examine this witness. Among other things, he would do per chance on a morning, while the church in progress, there should appear of the blessed Jesus? My friend refused and could not answer. I said, "I am not surprised. Me. The answer is 'repeated,' but it means nothing to the mouth" over the words of solemnity—and the church with some other things said to his disciples, "witnesses." What do most attend Church for, anyway?

I am speaking to an unseen church, and shall continue to do so. Some station every week. Will you be "listened to" these short messages? I am squarely between the church and honesty probe to the heart of your life? Possibly I ended you—if so I may pray for my spiritual uplift. Trust you will hear me on this same station, where there is an opportunity for a word before the "microphone."

"We have been placing too much expectancy in our government and legislative mechanism. The thing we must realize is that we cannot set up an instrument made from our own bone and sinew and then expect it to counteract our own foolishness."—Felix Hinkle.

The average motorist, however modest he may be in other respects, becomes an egomaniac as soon as he takes the wheel of his car.

He believes that traffic regulations should be rigidly enforced—so far as other drivers are concerned—but that he should be an exception to the rule. John Jones should be forced to keep down to twenty or thirty miles an hour—but he, whose abilities are hardly second to those of Sir Malcolm Campbell, can be trusted to drive as fast as he pleases.

The accident statistics demonstrate how tragically wrong this average motorist is. Nine out of ten accidents occurring last year were directly the fault of drivers or pedestrians. In only one out of ten was the mechanical condition of the car to blame. And in the overwhelming majority of instances the factor that led to the misadventure was excessive speed. The best proof of that lies in the fact that the rate of death per accident on highways—where speeds are naturally higher than on streets—was more than 100 per cent greater than the average for all accidents combined. In city accidents, the rate of death per accident was 52 per cent worse between intersections, where motorists speed up, than at intersections, where the bulk of drivers instinctively slow down.

A heavy foot on the throttle is the best friend the Dark Angel has.
At the present time, campaigns are underway in all states and most cities to enforce reasonable traffic regulations. The driver who thinks he can "safely" drive as fast as he wants, wherever he wants, must be taught the error of his ways.

With editorials in leading State newspapers and articles on the subject appearing in the weekly press throughout the State during the past winter, there should be little misunderstanding of the real advantages of further investment in advertising the recreational advantages of Maine. For several years the State has done well with a very modest appropriation for this purpose. With the proposed appropriation of $250,000 a more than proportionate increase should result. Other states with less to offer than has this State, have successfully presented their attractions to the nation.

More than the tourist appeal, there is opportunity for attracting generous spending conventions.
Usually a nominal amount of underwriting is required but always the returns are far in excess of the investment. The assured word of mouth advertising is every bit as effective in attracting more visitors

According to all signs, the Presidential campaign of 1936 is likely to make that of 1932—which was considered exceptionally bitter—look like a tea party. Issues are forming, forces are appearing, that are entirely unprecedented in American politics.

It seems inevitable that there will be a third party in the field—and it seems equally inevitable that that party will be of the extreme left. It may be led by Huey Long, backed by Father Coughlin, and use as its appeal the "Every man a King" thesis. It may be led by a Townsend Plan advocate, promising prosperity for all through governmental largesse to the aged. It may be led by someone who stands for something we haven't yet heard of.

Few think that the third party candidate would win—the Electoral College system of counting votes for the Presidency makes that practically impossible, as Roosevelt the first discovered, and as La Follette the elder did after him. The third party's importances lies in what effect it would have on the vote obtained by the regular Republican and Democratic candidates—and therein is an opportunity for endless conjecture.

Backers of the President poolpooh the third party, say he is certain to win a sweeping victory in '36 whether the movement materializes or not. Opponents of the President hold that the third party would draw millions of votes that would otherwise go to Mr. Roosevelt, would those indirectly cause the election of a conservative Republican, who would have support of most business men, together with the party's established following.

It was that aspect of the question which General Johnson spoke on in his amazing speech of a fortnight ago. Whatever you think of the General's views, you have to admit he has courage, he isn't afraid to speak his mind. In his speech he made a bitter attack on Long and Coughlin and all they stood for. Then he turned and lashed the conservatives who might encourage them in order to draw support away from Roosevelt and split the liberal-radical camp. General Johnson said that such political opportunism pushes the American democracy steadily toward "a licking or a dictator." It is an interesting fact that, following the speech, the General's views were heartily endorsed in many substantial quarters—including newspapers, public men and industrialists.

as is a large space in daily newspapers and national magazines.

The Maine Press Association has virtual assurance that the National Editorial Association, the largest group of newspaper editors in the country, will hold its 1936 convention in Maine if an invitation is extended. In this connection there will be columns and columns of otherwise unpurchasable publicity on the front pages of from 300 to 500 weekly and small daily newspapers in all parts of the country in addition to the other possible benefits.

Naturally some slight expense will be necessary to fittingly entertain these visitors. They will be critical but they will be appreciative. They will see what the casual visitors will not see—and they will write generously about it all in their own columns. The tremendous advertising return can easily be imagined. Which is why other states vie so earnestly for the visit of this desirable group.

Securing this convention, and probably others, as well as thousands more paying guests during the spring, summer and fall months, is contingent upon passage of this enlarged appropriation.
More money for advertising and greatly broadened publicity activities will be made possible by a larger expenditure. It should not be looked upon as an expense; it should be viewed solely as an investment that will bring tangible return to every business man in the State of Maine.

A question of the hour is, how does Mr. Roosevelt's strength compare to what it was a year ago?
The answer, made by boiling down the opinion of a legion of observers, is that he is slipping—but that he still has the confidence of course, doesn't answer the question of how far he may slip—or have regained or added strength—by next year. That, in turn, is going to depend on the state of recovery.

At the present time, the recovery program has failed in various important particulars—and, in addition, it has become confused with the reform program. Unemployment soars. More people are on relief than ever. Industry is sitting still, and many leaders seem pessimistic. A belief is prevalent that the President's program has lost direction—that it is whirling around in circles, is going nowhere.

It is that fact which supports the hopes of third party radicals—they feel that the people, if they see the failure of a more moderate program, will go for one that is really left-wing. And the conservatives, strangely enough, base their hopes on exactly the same thing—they believe that a Roosevelt collapse would send voters scurrying back to the right-wing of economic thought.

What is right? Guess as much as you like—but don't bet on it.

It is impossible to exaggerate the importance of the German refusal to continue to keep within the arms stipulations of the Versailles treaty. It has been feared that she would do this ever since Hitler went in—and every nation hoped against hope that it would never happen. Under the Treaty, Germany's army is limited to 100,000 men, and she is not allowed to have much in the way of aircraft, artillery, tanks. Now she will quadruple her army, greatly extend compulsory military training of citizens, and will build up her defensive and offensive equipment as much as she likes.

Inevitable result will be a boom in the munitions industries—and another long step toward European war. Every European country will, supposedly in self-defence, also increase armaments and armies. It is easy for diplomats to speak soothingly of security and to avow peaceful intentions—it is a historical fact that nations with first-class military machines usually want to try them out when they think the time is ripe.

Armed forces of principal nations total: Russia, 830,000 with 15,000,000 reserves; Great Britain, 200,000 with 280,000 reserves; France, 584,000, with 6,000,000 reserves; Italy, 427,000, with 6,000, 000 reserves; Poland, 325,000, with 1,700,000 reserves. The United States, by way of comparison, has an army of 145,000, with 309,000 reserves.

It cannot be termed a tax burden. It is a self-liquidating expense that will equalize itself many times over. It is sound economics, good business and common sense with able public servants ready to administer it for the greatest good to the greatest number. Maine needs to forge ahead of the pack, not to lag behind. Passage of this measure will put her well to the forefront of other aggressively competing states seeking the tourist dollar. That is where Maine belongs.

Do Not Forget Famous Dates

Far be it from the Uruguayans to forget their famous dates in history.
They may forget the particulars of what occurred, but forget the date—never. A daily lesson is taught to both grown-ups and children alike, and to visitors, too, for many of the most important thoroughfares are named to commemorate dates of significance in Uriguay's history. The most important of these is the Avenida 18 de Julio, or 18th day of July avenue, so named in honor of that day in 1930 when the constitution of the country became law. Two others of importance are Calle 25 de Mayo and Calle 25 de Agosto, or 25th of May and 25th of August streets, the former named to honor the independence of the colonies of the River Plate, obtained from Spain in 1810, the latter being the day in 1825 when the independence of the republic itself was proclaimed.

TENSION IN EUROPE

Berlin—As crowds stormed the Templehof Air Field and surged through the streets leading to the British Embassy, Sir John Simon, British Foreign Secretary, and Anthony Eden, Lord Privy Seal, arrived here by plane to undertake the most sensitive mission since the World War: the framing of formal representations against Hitler's scrapping of the Versailles Treaty by quadrupling Germany's army through conscription. With France and Italy in full accord with Great Britain, Poland added her protests over the week end, thus sweeping away from the Reich her last hope of a diplomatic alliance with any of her neighbors.

New York—Alien residents of the United States have been forcibly reminded of the threat of another European war by the arrival of questionnaires from their governments which they have been asked to fill out and return immediately. So far these documents seem confined to British and Italian subjects; it has not been ascertained as yet whether France, Germany or other Powers have made any move toward recalling their nationals. The questions relate to their previous war service, their present occupation and condition, and many other items of information. Many hundreds of thousands of aliens who have not taken out their first papers leading to American citizenship are technically subject to call by their native countries in case of war.

GOTHAM'S RACE RIOT

New York—The worst race riot in a quarter of a century churned this city's Negro Harlem into a frenzy when a detective in a chain-store caught a 16-year-old Puerto Rican stealing a ten-cent knife.
Alleging that store detectives were beating the lad, who, as a matter of fact, had been released unharmed, a vast crowd of infuriated negroes swept through Harlem hurling bricks through store windows, looting food markets, assaulting Whites. Five hundred uniformed police, 200 plain clothes men, 50 radio cars, restored order after two had been killed, hundreds injured, 200 stores rifled of $300,000 worth of merchandise, 121 rioters lodged in jail. Eleven bullets tore through the sides of a Boston-bound bus caught in the midst of the riot.

AGAIN THE BONUS

Washington — Facing certain Executive veto and in all probability an adverse vote in the Senate, the Patman Bonus Bill, appropriating $2,000,000,000 worth of special "greenbacks" to pay the soldier's bonus, was passed in the House of Representatives and will face a presumably hostile Senate within a few days.

THE FINAL TEST

New York—"Jimmy" Collins has for years earned his way by taking new planes designed for Navy use up to 20,000 feet, then turning their nose earthward and shoot down at 400 miles per hour with throttle wide open. It was his job to see just how much strain the planes could stand; he received from $1,000 to $1,500 for each test. A fortnight ago he got a job as an aviation columnist on a local tabloid; promised his wife and youngsters he would make only one more test flight. It was his last.
Over a Long Island field a wing tore loose and the heavy plane went into a spin from which it never emerged; its pilot crashed beyond all aid.

Five thousand miles away, another plane left a week ago carrying the Governor of French Equatorial Africa and his American wife high over the steaming valley of the Congo. Soon, lashed by a tropical storm, the plane's radio ceased to be heard. After a seven-days' search by plane and expedition, the wreck of the Governor's ship was found in the matted jungle, all seven passengers dead. M. Renard was the second French Colonial governor to lose his life in an air disaster in a little over a year.

MR. HOOVER'S BID

Washington—Political wags profess to see in a letter er a frank bid for the presidency next year. Critic the New Deal, the mounting debt and most of all of the recovery legislation, the former sident calls upon the voelements of the party to re-

"the greatest opportunity Ro-canism has had to serve the try since the days of Abracoln." Measured enthusiasm ed the proclamation; several ers were quoted as frankly cal of Mr. Hoover's ability to the party to success against dent Roosevelt.

THE WEEK IN BUSINESS

Washington—Marriner S. E-
Governor of the Federal Re-Board, quoted impressive fig-in defending the Administra-Banking Bill now before Con-started some of the orthodox mittee members by stating a national debt of $40,000,000 wasn't so terrifying; estimat-present debt at 25 billion.
Eccles pointed out that money costing the Government 4% instead of 4%. He formerly trolled a string of banks in Wyoming and Idaho before he the Administration. "They tell said the President in making appointment, "that he has those banks a long time and of them has failed yet."

CORPORATION REPORTS

New York—Company earn-for 1934 continue to show vances. During the week, statements came through, ingures representing the earn-per share of Common stock—1934 1935

FOREIGN BRIEFS

Warsaw—Under a new consti-tion, Poland ceases to be a de-cracy. The President has dis-powers over Premier, Cabinet, Supreme Court and the Army.
Manila—Filipinos have a months to reject or accept a of proposed constitution which ten years would provide for independence of the islands at price exacted by Uncle Sam in entry of American goods into islands duty free.

India—Because he killed in a court a Hindu accused of writing a scurrilous book about the phet Mohammed, Abdul Kayam came a Moslem hero over the but he was only another martyr in the stern eyes of British and was hanged at dawn. A of 20,000 admirers dug up corpses, paraded through the with it; created a riot in which two score died, hundreds wounded.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Theodore Gatlin decided to adopt a baby in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But all his love for their foster daughter could not shelter her from the hatred of his wife, who had never wanted her. Her affairs ended in the divorce court but ten-year-old Penelope was left in the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin, except for two Sunday afternoons a month. On their first day together they set out joyfully to play baseball game. A ball, hit into theachers, struck Penelope on the head and the neurotic Mrs. Gatlin removed her from the hospital which her former husband had tried her. Mrs. Gatlin spirited the child to Europe. Gatlin retired in business, while Penelope all money, and was about to begin search for his daughter when a car accident ended his life.

CHAPTER II.—Some ten years later in San Francisco Stephen Burt, a rising young psychiatrist, was assisted by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl whose terrible childhood and left her with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" was in part responsible. McNamara did not think she was a responsible criminal and obtained Burt's expert testimony in court. Even then the doctor's faithful office nurse, who was won over to her cause, spite Nance's, hard-boiled exterior.

CHAPTER III.—Nance's criminal record outweighed Doctor Burt's explanation of her case and she was sent to San Quentin penitentiary for two years. Lanny, who had been Nance's friend, visited her and Nance persuaded her to smuggle out a letter which a moderate stole from her handbag inside the prison walls.

CHAPTER IV.—Nance escaped, although shot, by swimming out to a boat-manned by friends and went to Lanny's apartment. Lanny and Chief McNamara, who ordered to bring Nance to his apartment and phoned for Doctor Burt.

CHAPTER V

The chief smiled. "Of course I know that hypnotism is being used by advanced psychiatrists and particularly by Morton Prince and William McDougall. I've read their books. The modern chief of police isn't modern, Doc, if he isn't a pretentious lay psychologist and psychiatrist. I don't know what a criminologist is, but I suppose he's a man that studies the criminal actions and tendencies of criminals and tries to reduce crime to its lowest common divisor. That's the link. The thing to do is to know their minds and why they act like they do; if you can cure what makes them go, criminology becomes a dead science.

"Yes, I know all about hypnotism and I know something you've forgotten. Your power of suggestion is powerful enough to make him feel or commit murder if he's an honest man. His acquired instincts of morality, which lie in his subconscious mind, are too strong for him. And the most powerful acquired instinct in the mind of a man is that he mustn't squeal. It's his idea of immorality! You let it on Nance Belden and she'll tell you almost anything but who her friends are, where they live and how they make a living."

"Well, we shall see—at another time. Meanwhile, what are you going to do with this girl? You can't keep her here, because that's dangerous unless you have her watched, and whom can you trust to watch her?"

"How about Lanny?"

"Lanny is my office nurse and I don't get along without her. She's under suspicion now and we've got to kill that. She must not come to her house again. And yet, this must be parked somewhere under her wound heels. She's suffering from the shock of this emotional experience now; she's lost considerable blood and suffered some pain. For five hours she's suffered from exposure. Her garments are soaking wet."

"If she forgot to tell those men to bring some dry clothing for her to hop into, once she got aboard the boat, my heart will just about break. That would be one flaw in a perfect job—and I can't stand flaws."

And Dan McNamara strode into the room where Nance lay with her hand in Lanny's. "Why didn't you tell your friends to bring you some dry clothes?" he demanded.

Nance smiled up at Lanny. "He thinks I'm a nut, after all, Lanny. Why, of course I wouldn't overlook that detail. I changed my clothes, but when we crossed the bay it was rough and there was a police boat on our trail. He had to outrun them—and you do forty miles an hour through a mile of tide-rips and you'll all but drown in the spray!"

"Thank God for that," the chief murmured. "I'm proud of you and your friends, Nance. I hope neither of them was hit."

For the barest fraction of a second Nance hesitated, then answered. "No, they got through all right, but how they did is a mystery. The boat was riddled."

Dan McNamara came back into the living room and on his heavy face was the faintest, most cryptic of grins.

"I'm going to get one or both of Nance's friends, Doc," he exulted. "One of them was hit, and he'll have to have medical attention. Not that I want to land either one of them for this job, but because I want to give them the once-over. At that they might be somebody we're looking for."

"Did Nance tell you one of them had been hit?"

"No, but she hesitated half a second when she told me neither of them had been hit. She never hesitates ordinarily. Her co-ordination is lightning fast—well, you get so, Doc, that you know when they're lying. Go to the telephone, call up your home and ask if you've had any telephone calls within the past hour."

Stephen obeyed and was informed that a man, who refused to leave his name, had called up three times and had left word he would call again; that he had seemed very anxious to know when the doctor would return.

"I knew it—I knew it," Dan McNamara's pride in his own perspicacity was almost juvenile. "I figured Nance would tell them to go to you. And I'll make another prophecy. They'll admit they are friends of hers and that she sent them there. She's told them you're her friend and that you'll not turn them up to me. A wounded crook is always up against it, Doc, unless he knows a crooked doctor. And in this case the radio has broadcast the warning of two hundred and fifty dollars out for Nance too—standing state reward for recapturing an escaped convict."

"Come on, Doc. I'll go to your home with you and pick these birds up."

"No, you shall not. I wouldn't turn those two men over to you for ten thousand dollars. They're too good."

"Yes, they have guts. They can be trusted on a particular job I want to put through. Word of honor, Steve. I'll not pinch them. I just want to talk with them."

A block from Stephen's home Dan McNamara got out of the doctor's car. He had already received from Stephen Burt a description of the ground-floor plan of his house. And Stephen had agreed to leave his latchkey under the mat at the front door.

The chief watched Stephen put up his car and enter his house. A light was shining in the entrance hall, and this light Stephen, in accordance with the chief's instructions, switched off.

In about five minutes the chief saw this light switched on and off twice. That meant the doctor had received another telephone message. Then the light was switched on and off ten times. That meant the patient would arrive in about ten minutes, so Dan McNamara hid himself in the deep shadow of a tradesman's entrance at the side of a house across the street, and waited.

In ten minutes almost to the second, a car, with drawn curtains, drove up to the house and two men got out. The chief could see that one of them had to have assistance, so the driver got out and helped the other man half drag, half carry, the wounded man up the steps. Stephen opened the door and the three men entered; immediately McNamara ran across the street and up the front steps behind them, found the latchkey under the mat, opened the door and stepped inside. He could hear voices in Stephen's reception room, so he drew his pistol and stepped silently up to the entrance of it.

"Put 'em up, boys," he ordered cheerfully. He drew back his left lapel and revealed his blue and gold shield. "No necessity to argue in the smoke. This isn't a hanging matter."

He forced the two unwounded men to stand with their backs toward him while he ran his facile hands over their persons and relieved each of a pistol. He "broke" both guns and placed the cartridges in his pocket.

"I beg your pardon, Doctor, for entering your house unannounced, but you left your front door unlatched and I couldn't resist. I had a notion these men might call upon you. Just a hunch, because the warden tipped us off to watch the home of your office nurse, Miss Lanning. So, while watching the home of the servant I concluded to watch that of the master, also. Sit down, boys. Never mind us, Doc. The man on the table needs all of your attention. Fix him up nicely and let him lie there until I come back. He can't run away, and if he tries, don't you let him. You other men come with me down to the central office till I see if we have anything on you. I don't appear to have the honor of your acquaintance, but we'll look the rogues' gallery over and compare fingerprints. While there's life, there's hope. You got an open fireplace in your house, Doctor?"

Stephen saw that McNamara was pretending they had not previously met. "Yes, Chief. In the drawing room. It's all set."

"I want to warm these boys up and dry them out. They did good work this afternoon and they deserve good treatment. Prop that wounded man long enough to dig up a couple of stiff joints of spirits; fragment for my lady, will you, Doc? I always warm a cold man from the outside in and from the inside out."

"Thank you, Chief," both men muttered.

The three retired to the drawing room and the chief tossed one of the men a box of matches. "Fire up," he commanded. "Then draw yourself up to the blaze and drink the grog the doctor will give you. Where's your pal hit?"

"Top of the right shoulder, calf of the left leg and biceps of the left arm."

"So he's the chap that dragged Nance out of the water, eh? He was in the rear cockpit, but you were up front driving the boat. There are forty bullet holes in the rear of that boat." He sighed. "These machine guns certainly spray things. You didn't drop your own machine gun overboard, either. They're too valuable and hard to get. A Thompson, I suppose. A Tommy gun and a Tommy man! Visiting brethren—from Chicago, I suppose. That's why we haven't met before. Pardon me a minute while I look for the Tommy gun in your car. And if you want to die in a hurry just try beating it out the back way while I'm gone."

He returned in less than a minute with the one-man machine gun in his hands. "We've got Nance Belden where you dropped her," he announced, "so while you're lapping up that whisky, tell me all about it."

"So Nance told you where to look for us, eh?" The man who had handled the motor boat spoke with withering contempt and hatred. Instantly Dan McNamara cuffed him viciously on the side of the head. "Apologize for that," he roared. "You're so d—d crooked you think everybody else is, too."

The man mumbled an apology. "No, Nance didn't tell me, you rat," McNamara went on, "and I didn't ask her, because I knew she wouldn't tell. But I did think she'd tip you off to call on this doctor. You dropped her at the home of his office nurse; I put two and two together and decided to investigate—all by myself. And here we are. Got any idea why I came alone?"

"No."

"Because I wanted to save you from the consequences of the job you pulled off this afternoon. I'm in sympathy with that, and as far as I'm concerned Nance Belden isn't going back to San Quentin. And she isn't going back to your gang, either. Now, you play the game with me and I'll play it with you. Double-cross me and I'll hang something hard on you, and you and your friends won't be heard of in public for a long time."

"Nance had no right to be there," the man protested to McNamara. "The poor kid's queer." He tapped his forehead. "But she framed a sweet getaway. If it would work, and we figured it might. So we thought we'd give the girl a hand. She's all right. I've got a blind brother that would have starved to death if it hadn't been for Nance Belden; as for the man the doctor's working over now, Nance took care of his wife while he was in the stir. Helped her when she had a baby. Chief, that girl's a saint. The only trouble with her is that she's a devil, too. You never know how to figure her."

"You've figured her right. She's queer. And what's your wounded friend been doing since he got out of stir? What did he get in for?"

"He got in for bootlegging and he's been bodyguard for a boss bootlegger since he got out."

"I'm m-m-m! And what's your specialty?"

"I don't know what line I'll take up, Chief. I've only been out of the United States army disciplinary barracks on Alcatraz Island a month. I was a soldier—and I poked an officer."

"Oh, you're the machine-gunner, eh? Learned to shoot in the army, I suppose?"

"If I hadn't, I'd have killed that guard. I could have gotten him if I cared to, but instead I scared him with ovals and shorts. Did I scare the roof of that lookout tower?"

"You certainly did and scared the man at the Brasserie gun these well, you're quite a shot. What does your friend the doctor do?"

"Delivers bootleg. He took a chance for a friend."

"You may go," said Dan McNamara to the chauffeur. "Take your car and heat it. But I'll see you and if you tell my rough crew in this city I'll find you out in the grass. On your way."

The man did promptly and he turned to the ex-soldier. "I've got Nance out at my house," he explained. "Doctor Burt has fixed her up and I'm not going to turn her in. Neither am I going to turn her out, because she'll be picked up. That saddle nose of hers is a dead give-away."

The man nodded lugubriously.

"We've got to find a quiet spot for your friend, too," the chief went on meditatively. "A man with three bullet holes in him is in an embarrassing fix—when he's wanted. So we'll take him out to my house, too. That's the only safe place I can think of."

"How about me?"

"You've been a soldier, so I suppose you can carry out orders?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, your orders are to come out to my house, too, and take care of your friends. The doctor will call every day and tell you what to do. And you'll have to do the cooking."

"I can do that, too. Not fancy, but they can eat it."

"All right, you've got a job and a holding-up place as well. I'll go home now and get my car and come back for you and your friend. Meanwhile don't you get cold feet and disappear. I want to talk to you some more. I want to find out all about Nance Belden, and you and your friend might be able to give a line on her."

"I don't know anything about her, Chief, except that her real name is Penelope Gatlin."

Dan McNamara clasped his corrugated brow in both hands and pondered. "Gatlin! Gatlin! Penelope Gatlin! Now, where have I run across that name in my business? I don't usually forget names, and I seem to remember I had a call once for somebody by that name or else somebody by that name called on me. It was a long time ago. I'll have to look that up—I wonder if there's anything in the files at headquarters."

It was midnight before Nance Belden's two friends were installed with her in Dan McNamara's house. Lanny looked both men over carefully and confided in the chief that she wouldn't trust either of them as far as she could throw a bear by its tail, to which Mr. McNamara replied that one of them couldn't raise any devilry if he wanted to, while the other dared not. Moreover, this latter was the only practical nurse he could secure. A trained nurse might talk; on the other hand, this friend of Nance's had been educated to keep his mouth shut. "And a very great virtue," McNamara added. "His freedom is in my keeping and my honor is in his, so we have to trust each other. Besides, it's high time you got home."

The phone rang and Dan answered it. When he rejoined Lanny he was smiling broadly. "You're a bum mopper-up," he accused. "That was Flynn, one of the detective sergeants on watch at your house. He found two drops of blood you overlooked, so he thinks you and Nance are in the house but refuse to answer the bell, and he wants permission to break in, in the name of the law. He says he can slide the latch on your front door lock like nobody's business. I told him to wait another hour and then try it, but to be careful."

Lanny's independent and belligerent nature was instantly aroused. "If I couldn't give a snapper like that cards and spades, the four aces, big and little casino, and beat him to death on the sweeps, I'd kiss a cow," she declared. "Guess I'll go home and make those big boots feel ashamed of themselves for disturbing a lady."

"Whatever you do, be nice to them, Lanny, they'll just wait you down to central station and stow you away for the night—with the excuse that the chief wants to see you. And I've decided I don't know you. If I did I'd go home with you."

To be continued next week.

UPTON

Mrs. Bertha Juddkins and Mrs. G. A. Juddkins have gone to Upton to attend Farm and Home Week, the former as a delegate from the Upton Farm Bureau.

The Farm Bureau held a very interesting meeting at the home of Mrs. H. W. Whitney, Friday, March 22, with Miss Callaghan, H. D. A. present. The subject was Clothing and Textile Standards.

Mrs. Flora Cummings of Oxford is spending this week with her brother, A. W. Juddkins.

Allen Fredin, who spent the winter at Birch Point Camps, has moved to Mexico.

Mr. and Mrs. Elijah White of Mexico are visiting with her brother, Edgar Worster.

Reservoir Keeps Tab on Height, Phones Figures

One of the queerest telephone numbers is on Biddulph, a tiny exchange, near Hanley, Staffordshire, says the Montreal Herald. Anyone phoning this number suddenly hears a weird and powerful voice repeating at short intervals: "Six-four... Six-four... Six-four..." or some other figures. It is the voice of a reservoir. Over a thousand feet above sea-level, on the top of Mow Cop, is the reservoir of Congleton Urban district council.

Every day a reading has to be obtained of the height of the water in the reservoir. To save the strenuous climb up the hill, the council officials installed a device which automatically speaks the height of the water to anyone telephoning. The secret of the apparatus is a gramophone record. The moment the phone bell rings a telephone receiver alights on the record. This receiver is connected to a float on the surface of the water. As the height of the water varies, so does the place where the receiver alights. The record then "talks" the exact figure into the telephone receiver. It repeats it eight times, and then stops off. The phone number of the reservoir—23—is listed in the directory. The "voice" is perfectly distinct on a trunk call from London.

Types of Boats

A schooner is a fore-and-aft rigged vessel, originally and still typically having two masts, with the smaller sail on the foremast and the mainmast stepped nearly amidships. Catboat—a one-masted sailboat having its mast stepped well forward, carrying a single fore-and-aft sail extended by a gaff and boom and usually having a centerboard. Yawl—a small vessel rigged like a cutter, with the addition of a jigger mast. Ketch—a single-masted fore-and-aft rigged vessel carrying a mainsail and a jib and often a staysail and gaff-top-sail. It has also a fixed bowsprit, topmast and standing rigging. Ketch—a strongly built two-masted vessel, fore-and-aft rigged similar to a yawl except that the mainmast of the ketch is stepped forward of the rudderpost.

Home of Coffee

Ethiopia is the original home of coffee. The tree was first found there by Arab travelers in the province of Kafa, from which the beverage takes its name. Seed was taken from Kafa to the Mocha district in Arabia. In Kafa and adjoining parts of southwestern Ethiopia may be seen vast and virgin forests of coffee. The tree grows without care. Thousands of tons of berries fall to the ground in waste every year.

CHURCH ACTIVITIESMETHODIST CHURCH

P. J. Clifford, Pastor
9.45. The Sunday School will try to recover from the shock of Sunday last. Locke Mills increased its lead to 69 by the finest team work possible. Bethel was good with 107 in attendance but Locke Mills with 130 made a real record. The Sunday School is calling for help. Five weeks more and 69 behind. Every man, woman and child in Bethel who is not an attendant of another school is urged to be present.

There will be special music—and cars on all roads to bring those desiring to attend. Come and help keep Bethel from a disgraceful defeat.

The next meeting will be held Sunday evening, April 7th, when the topic will be "Fascism and Nazism." Eugene Van will be the discussion leader.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SOCIETY

Sunday School at 10 o'clock.
Services Sunday morning at 10.45.

"Reality" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, March 31.

The Golden Text is: "Thou, O Lord, shalt endure for ever; and thy remembrance unto all generations" (Psalms 102:12).

Among the citations from the Bible is the following: "For verily I say unto you, that many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them" (Matthew 13:17).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The testimony of the corporeal senses cannot inform us what is real and what is delusive, but the revelations of Christian Science unlock the treasures of Truth" (p. 70).

LOCKE MILLS STILL LEADING S. S. CONTEST

Locke Mills Sunday School still holds a substantial lead in the 10 weeks contest with the Bethel Methodist school. It is understood that the Bethel folks are working hard to overcome the handicap of their slow start, but they will have to draw record attendance the next five weeks to match the Locke Mills totals.

The Granby Token

The Granby token (1737) was a private copper coinage issued by John Higley of Granby, Conn., where there were copper mines, afterward used as Tory prisons and workshops. The obverse was a deer, with the legend, "Value Me As You Please"; Roman numerals III and crescent. The reverse was three hammers on a triangular field, each surmounted by a crown, and with the legend, "I Am Good Copper."

Rifles of Civil War Days

In the American Civil war troops of both the North and South were armed with rifles, shooting elongated bullets rounded at the nose rather than the old round bullets of that period were muzzle-loaders, though as the war progressed breech-loading rifles were introduced from time to time.
